目的 / Purpose	This is an introductory course in principles of economics. Most of the course can be divided into two broad segments: microeconomics and macroeconomics. Microeconomics analyzes the interactions of individual consumers and producers in the markets. Macroeconomics focuses at the national level, examining the determination of important national variables, such as GDP, the rate of inflation, the level of unemployment, as well as flows of imports and exports and the balance of trade. Course participants will also understand the mechanisms for government policies to improve or hinder economic performance at either the microeconomics or macroeconomics
達成目標 / Goals	This course is an introduction to the field of economics for students. Students will master the fundamental idea of the range of behaviors that economists investigate, also the basic tools that we use to analyze the economy, and apply these tools to government policy issues. Most importantly, students will be introduced to the “economic way of

目的 / Purpose	The course provides an overview of key concepts, actors and issues of international relations as well as the theories that attempt to explain them. The class will look at some of the most important problems that are central to understanding international affairs. What, for example, are the causes of war and peace? When do actors decide whether to go to war (as Russia and Ukraine did) or cooperate? The class emphasizes critical thinking and encourages students to identify international relations theories that have greater explanatory power for issues that will be discussed in class. In-class discussions will expand the understanding of the students on lectures and reading
達成目標 / Goals	Students will be able to apply the major theoretical approaches such as realism, liberalism, and constructivism to world events and interpret them through critical thinking. In this way, students will be able to look at the issue from different angles and analyze it more deeply.

目的 / Purpose	This course is the first of a two part series. The focus of both Critical Thinking I and II is on learning about the power of language--the language that manipulates and misleads, and the language that defines and clarifies. You will learn to understand the basic argument types, and how to recognize and use the language used in making arguments. Critical Thinking I aims to teach the art and skills of critical thinking through careful reading/listening, skillful questioning, and solid reasoning.
達成目標 / Goals	This course will improve your English reading, listening, speaking, and writing. You will learn new vocabulary, improve your receptive English skills, and practice your productive English skills. In the end, you will become more proficient at English and have better critical thinking skills.
